Back in the old days (late 60's/early 70's...I think) Sears sold a 2M mobile rig. I think it was a Yaesu model. Also, if memory serves me correctly, back in the REAL old days (late 50's) Sears sold HF gear. I don't remember what brands but I think it was Hallicrafters and maybe some others. Of course, back in ancient times (50+ yrs ago), you could buy a house from Sears, cars from Sears

(the Allstate...a Kaiser Henry J), and about anything else...all mail order. I guess Sears's decline has kind of followed the decline of the U.S. amateur radio manufacturer's. Hmmm...wonder if that has anything to do with incentive licensing or the no-code license.

A crazy thing happened this weekend while I was trying out 80m CW.

I heard a snapping sound while I was trying to tune up (using a Vectronics VC300DLP tuner). When I popped the lid, I found that the "transmitter" variable capacitor was arcing! It arced whenever I got over 30W or so. Later tests showed that it also happened on 40m and 10m. Why is this happening? Is my tuner defective? How can I stop it?

Does anyone have a manual for the FRG7700 ?
I would appreciate if someone could post
the information to Ireland by E-mail or S-mail. Cost of mailing could be covered.

Does anyone know the phone number to call to order Yaesu parts? I want to order a couple mobile mounting brackets for my 5100. In spite of a careful RTFM, I couldn't find a phone number in the manual.

Thanks & 73... Mark AA7TA
